For the meat and cheese course, it is totally ok to use your fingers to place the prosciutto on your bread or to combine it with cheese. It's a lot easier than trying to cut it and eat it with a fork.

Parmigiano Reggiano
Right now we are in Parma, the city which is famed for Parmesan cheese. The Parmesan cheese that comes directly from this region is known as "parmigiano reggiano"... ever head of that term? Now you know why it's the good stuff! This region is also known for its "Parma ham" aka "prosciutto di Parma"

Fun fact: Parmesan cheese should never, ever, ever be added to true Italian spaghetti with fresh tomato sauce. We learned this about 5 seconds too late. We were told it was ok though because we are in Parma and when in Parma you can add Parmesan cheese to literally everything.

HOWEVER...
@christinascucina taught us that dishes such as ravioli (or tortelli) should be "bathed in butter and then dried with lots of Parmesan cheese"
That is the most beautiful Italian poetry I have heard so far.

Ketchup. Ok it sounds weird but it was SO GOOD. It was so sweet but there was no added sugars. The tomatoes, themselves, are so sweet it doesn't need sugar.

We visited CIBUS, which is a HUGE expo in Parma. It fills 5 buildings with vendors from all over Italy. We sampled everything from tomatoes, to pasta, to cheese, to gelato and everything in between.
This is dried pasta from La Fabbuca della Pasta di Gragnano. You can order it online. SO GOOD.

Look closely.
This is what makes Italian pasta so good. See that texture? This helps the sauce cling to the pasta after it has been boiled.

favoritefamilyrecipes Saluti amici! Greetings from Italy and Cibus Parma an international food exhibition which focuses on the promotion of Italian food. I wish we could bring all of you here to taste... and I mean really taste and savor...food that has been grown and prepared in the same way it was hundreds of years ago, without additives and preservatives. Mille grazie to @anicav_associazione for hosting us as well educating us on quality, nutritious, and sustainable foods, particularly one of our favorite foods - tomatoes! 🍅
